

Dear Employer,

I am interested growing my professional development by joining a professional association, Women in Government Relations. Founded in 1975, Women in Government Relations, Inc. (WGR) is one of the most respected non-profit, non-partisan government relations associations in the Washington metropolitan area. WGR's over 1000 members include women and men at all professional levels representing corporations, trade associations and professional societies, law firms, lobbying firms, non-profit groups and federal, state and local governments.

My membership in WGR will greatly benefit our company through representation and visibility as well as my professional growth. WGR members have numerous opportunities to network with policymakers and other government affairs professionals, increasing visibility and access to information. As a WGR member, my participation in leadership activities will lead to increased education and awareness in specific policy areas, as well as increased skills in public relations, meeting coordination, budget management, and public speaking.

Membership fees for a nonprofit membership are $150 and WGR provides low registration fees and many free events to its members. If you would like to learn more about the benefits of joining WGR please visit their website www.wgr.org.

I hope you will consider supporting my membership in this great organization.

Sincerely,

Potential WGR Member
